

LETTER FROM THE CEO & BOARD PRESIDENT

Nick Seeberger,
CEO

Mark Mosiniak,
Board President

Together again! The last year saw a significant pivot at the co-op as we started hosting events and bringing people together again. Our cooperative Ends state that the co-op will support a healthy community. COVID and the slow recovery made it difficult to build community through interactions and events, but that all changed last year. Over 500 members and neighbors came to our Local Fest relaunch in September of 2022 to enjoy a community meal, meet our farmers and producers and dance to the music of DJ Mehdi. Throughout the year we saw faces new and old filling our dining area as people got together over food and beverages – among my favorites has been the return of the Mahjong players and card-playing groups who use our extended dining area regularly to enjoy games and fellowship. Over the last year we have invested time, capital and effort in making the co-op a great gathering place, and we are happy to share the results of our efforts.

Our strategic priorities for the last year were to improve the customer experience at the store as we prepared for significant competition, to lay the groundwork for a second retail location and to invest in the Valley's Own Bakehouse so it can continue to grow and expand. When creating our plan it was expected that Amazon Fresh would be opening three locations in our immediate market area (Eagan, Burnsville and Lakeville). To prepare for the impact we invested in self-checkout lanes and partnered with Ace Sushi to launch an in-house sushi program. Self-checkout has been very popular with 30% of all transactions running through the registers.

It has also allowed us to be flexible with staffing, as many of our staff spend part of their shift working in another department such as Produce, and then helping out at the cash registers as needed. Sushi proved to be both delicious and popular, supporting significant growth in our overall prepared foods sales as people started going out for lunch and dinner again. Customer counts remain strong, and our efforts to have a great co-op experience appear to be meeting our customers' needs.

Valley's Own Bakehouse, our gluten-free wholesale baked goods production facility in Rosemount, once again experienced growth and change. Last fiscal year was the first whole year under manager Manette Olsen who has applied her relationship-building skills to grow sales while continuing to improve operations at the facility. Manette, and the entire staff of the bakehouse, worked tirelessly this year to manufacture all of our Valley's Own Bakehouse products, and our recently acquired Kakookies products. Sales were up 17% year-over-year and we expect many more years of growth to come.

The co-op had a strong year financially, setting us up for future growth and expansion. Our sales of $15,182,903 were 5.7% greater than the previous year. This growth included a period of 9 months of sales impacted by a new grocer opening in our market area. Our net income was $156,097, not enough for member-owner patronage refunds (patronage refunds are based upon taxable income which remains $0 due to losses carried forward), but a step in the right direction.

We accomplished what we set out to do last year, and our member-owners and customers responded by shopping more frequently and making the co-op a core part of your grocery shopping. Looking forward, we continue to search for ways to meet the changing needs of our community, from expanding options for local and organic foods, to growing our house-made food options, to offering interesting classes and compelling events. We are confident that the co-op remains strong and our brightest days remain ahead.

In co-operation,

Nick Seeberger, CEO
Mark Mosiniak, Board President
